

MAJOR ANNOUNCEMENT:

THE UNIVERSITY OF OKLAHOMA ADOPTS ACS INCONTROL

Austin, TX (March 20, 2007) – The University of Oklahoma will begin using ACS Athletics and the ACS InControl™ system as its real-time, web-based student-athlete information and compliance management system, ACS officials announced today. This system will serve OU's more than 500 student-athletes and key athletic personnel including coaches, administrators and support staff.

The University of Oklahoma athletics department reviewed and evaluated a variety of vendors and selected ACS Athletics. "Real-time access to information and reports as provided by our InControl™ system are a necessity in today's competitive and regulatory environment," said Rayan Rutledge, VP of Business Development, ACS Athletics. "The increased efficiencies we provide our customers allow coaches and administrators to perform at a higher level and focus on jobs they were hired to do."

Moving to a single source of data provides users the capability to combine information across various operations and obtain an instant view of what's happening across an entire organization, whether it be student services, recruiting, compliance or operations, ACS officials said. These capabilities offer a distinct advantage competitively, and in planning and making critical on-the-spot decisions. Users have access to dynamic analytical reports on screen to monitor their critical success factors and performance indicators in key areas like compliance. These interactive reports allow the user to not just monitor everything that is important to the unit but also to investigate variances and get immediate answers within a few mouse clicks.

The University of Oklahoma strives to maintain a model program in athletics using best practices nationwide, including investing in technology that can improve transparency, accountability, efficiency and productivity.

"We look forward to meeting the information and business-process management needs of the University of Oklahoma's growing athletics department," said Phillip Engle, president, ACS Athletics. "This affiliation demonstrates our leading market capabilities as well as our commitment to the information management needs of today's intercollegiate athletic programs. We are delighted to be working with the University of Oklahoma Athletics Department to help them focus on their highest priority - providing an excellent environment to enable student-athletes to achieve their highest academic, athletic and personal aspirations."
